

Dear Sirs:

I must emphatically urge you NOT to change the rules of media ownership. Already huge conglomerates are taking over many aspects of public domain and I can't at all see any benefits for the community both at large and on a smaller scale. Take Clear Channel who owns almost all the billboards, if not all, and some 1500 radio stations across the country.... No one should have the right to take away what keeps the very essence of what it means to be an American: freedom of speech, of information, of public discourse, freedom of both the expression of the individual and the country as a whole. Changing the rules in favor of the conglomerates will only further degrade our country. LET'S STAND UP FOR SOMETHING, PEOPLE! Lest we find ourselves being fed from a trough.
